MARTIN BROFMAN'S STORY:

In 1975, Martin Brofman, at the age of 34, found himself in a hospital being prepared for surgery. His doctors had diagnosed a spinal cord tumor in his neck that was causing the progressive paralysis that he had been experiencing in his arms and his legs.

After the operation, the doctors gave him the bad news that they were not able to remove the tumor because of its involvement with the spinal cord. The tumor was malignant, Martin was told, and he was given a month or two to live - unless he coughed or sneezed, in which case he might die immediately.

Martin Brofman learned methods of working on himself to heal his condition, using relaxation techniques, visualization, affirmations, and he practiced daily . morning on arising, noon after lunch, and evening before retiring. He visualized the tumor melting away while sending positive instructions to his subconscious mind, and involved himself in research to see how he had created the tumor, so he could find ways of releasing it. He worked on himself for 2 months, and then, one year after the operation, he returned for a new examination. The doctor was surprised to find that there was no longer any evidence of a tumor. This was the same doctor who had told Martin Brofman a year before that he was terminally ill.

From what he learned about the body mind interface during his own healing, Martin Brofman developed the Body Mirror System of Healing. It is now taught around the world by Martin and other instructors he has trained, helping others to be healed mentally, physically, emotionally and spiritually, and also teaching them to function as healers.

The philosophy presented by Martin is that by taking responsibility for what happens in your mind and your body, you can put yourself in a position to bring yourself to balance on all levels.
